Yesterday afternoon was a gala one for the rooters and admirers of the Nofolk team, for they had an opportunity to smile and congratulate each other over the two successive defeats administered to the green legged lads administered to the green legged lads from across the river. It was a long time coming, it is true, but it was none the less enjoyable. It has been said by some one "that more pleasure could be derived from expectation than from realization, but it is not true in this case, for the Norfolk people have been expecting the "Clams" to do this very thing several times this season, but their expectations did not materialize, consequently their hopes were for the time being dashed into the slough of despond. But, thanks to the realization of expectations, they can now rejoice and pectations, they can now rejoice and pectations, they can now rejoice and make themselves exceedingly happy over the utter ront of the visitors yestorday afternoon.

Of the games there is nothing special to chroncle, except that the home team fielded spiendidly, making only two errors in the game, neither of which cost anything, while the field work of the visitors was of a ragged order, Fuller, particularly, distinguishing himself in that line having three errors charged against him, while keed, Knoz, Hall and Clare, came in for one each, nearly all of which were costly. McGann, Corcoran, O'Hagan, Kelly, Cole, Chard and Tate played the game as it should be played. Thornton and Geier had nothing to do and took things easy.

For the "Truckers" Leach started things easy.

For the "Truckers," Leach started in to pitch, but only remained in the box the first inning and a part of the second when he was relieved by Clare. Leach acted badly and reminded one of the boy in the story who did not know whether he was coming home or going to school, on account of the way his mother made his pantaloous. Leach acted as if he was angry at Ma Laughlin's decisions, but as "Eddie" is very "foxy," it is more than likely that he was not feeling well and was afraid of the result, as two hits had been made off his delivery when he retired, Clare pitched tha game out and his work was excellent, and if his support had been even fair the result would in all probability have been different. Chard, for the "Clams," was at his best, and while he was only found for eight hits, four of them, including a home run by Clare, were bunched in the sixth inning, netting four runs, Not another run was made before or after that inning, Tue score:

the contest, Vetter at first base making an error that was directly responsible for two runs.

But the star play of the afternoon, so far as dumb ball playing was concerned, was in the sixth inning, when with two men out and a man on first the runner started down to second Childs threw the ball right over the bag as prettily as it could be done, and away it bounded out into centre field to Hargrove, who, wanting to do something sensational, turned his back and ran as if he was running after the ball, but the base runner was up to his trick, and white Hargrove was running from the plate has was running toward it and scored. Hargrove then stood and looked like the little boy who was late at a pionic. When Childs threw to second Reed and Hall stood in their positions like pieces of statuary, and made no offort whatever to field it. This, of course, helped to throw a damper on the game, and the visitors then played as if it was only to finish the game, and nothing more. Brandt and Fuller did elegant work, as did Childs, but none of the wisitors could gange the univery of

The Second Game, This square was but a repetition of the first, so far as the good work of the Norfolk team was concerned, every body playing good, clean, enapty ball, while the visitors were untortunate enough to make errors at critical points which let in enough runs to the "Claims" to make them the winners of the contest, Vetter at first base making an error that was directly responsible for two runs.

But the star play of the afternoon, so far, as dumb ball playing was concerned, was in the error column.

And now we are to have theatrical cutertainments at Ocean View and free to the public. Fine attractions have been engaged and the Ocean View Railway and Hotel Company will surely reap the reward of large patronage. Norfolk is about the only city of consequence in the United States that has had no summer amusements of a theatrical nature, and the innovation at this time will be most welcome. If proof of the high class nature of the cutertainment were needed, the fact of the engagement of a celebrity like Cyrone, the dancer, would convince the most skeptical. Cyrone is probably the best known dancer living. She has made herself famous all over the world by the performing. Another professor of great fame is Willie Turnour, a most daring trapeze artist and dancer. Miss Turnour is a sister of Cyrone and appears in conjunction with the latter in a sketch entitled "After the Bull Fight" a famous U.S. Navy and Black Serge Suits
